What will you learn from the workshop opportunity?

- Participants learn to implement identification strategies proven particularly responsive to under-represented populations as a part of a larger comprehensive identification system; these strategies in combination with quantitative and other qualitative assessments can enable more K-6 children from all demographic groups to demonstrate their potential for high performance.
- Research-based, differentiated learning experiences are demonstrated to enrich learning opportunities for all learners while identifying and challenging highly able students.
- This practical and effective system is designed to elicit and diagnose highly able behaviors, integrate with instruction and learning standards, and minimize teachers' paper work and preparation time.
- Materials are included that enable you to coach other professionals in the building using the KOI book and twenty-four planned experiences provided in this binder and CD-ROM. Additional training information and black-line masters are included to ease your preparation when training others.
